Lawyers at Nabil Farag Law Firm have been speakers in many conferences and forums. They are lecturers at: Lloyd's Maritime Academy, London, UK; Arab Academy for Science, Technology & Maritime Transport (AASTMT); ship arrested academy in Antwerp, Belgium. They also presented research findings at many national and international conferences. Therefore, they are authorised to be lecturers in many associations working in the maritime field in addition to being the legal consultants to some of them.

Due to their expertise, the firm's practitioners contributed to publications in many newspapers and met with great interest by professionals involved in the maritime industry.

Mr Farag commented on its team's excellence: "Our Law Firm has its own vision, so we had some suggestions concerning maritime law in Egypt that could be fruitful for maritime trade and investment. We wrote articles for national specialised magazines, and we are doing research on the maritime sector. As a result of all these efforts our suggestions were taken into account by official bodies in and out of Egypt and they were also discussed in the meeting of Arab ministers of transport."
